Aghadoe
place of the two yew trees

Welcome

We are delighted to welcome you to Aghadoe Heights Hotel & Spa. Our name comes from the original celtic name for the area, 'Ath Dha Eo', meaning 'place of the two yew trees'.

The ancient Pagan Celts believed that yew trees had magical and mystical qualities and as such this place became revered by them. The magic of the yew tree was so respected that the ancient druids made their wands out of yew. Aghadoe has been calling visitors here for thousands of years, for celebrations and festivals.

So relax, enjoy a drink and find out about this beautiful place and its long standing connection with nature, folklore and myths.

introducing The Liberator

The Liberator Irish Whiskey is made by the O'Connell family on the Lakeview Estate, our neighbours on the lakeshore below the hotel.

The name celebrates their forebear, Daniel O'Connell, the civil rights and anti-slavery campaigner, often cited as Ireland's greatest son. His insistence on peaceful protest only and his powerful oratory united his countrymen to ensure their voice was heard for the first time and was the inspiration for figures from Gandhi to Frederick Douglass. In 2018 the family converted some of their 300 year old stone farm buildings into a bonded warehouse, blending and bottling facility. All of their whiskeys are in small batches and their processes are about as far from industrial whiskey as it gets. Now you can sample their whiskeys here at the Aghadoe Hotel & Spa where we have three to choose from. You can see more of their story on their website www.waywardirish.com and choose your favourite on the next page...

Liberation our signature cocktail

Having sampled The Liberator Whiskeys, our mixologists were inspired to create Liberation, our signature cocktail.

Taking inspiration from an Old Fashioned, we use The Liberator Double Port Finish mixed with cherry & orange bitters and sugar syrup. Stirred over ice and garnished with a twist of orange. But what makes this really special and unique to Aghadoe, is that we then smoke it, using oak chips made from the same unique barrels in which the whiskey was matured. This rich and intense smokiness pairs exceptionally well with dark spirits like whiskey or bourbon, enhancing their complexity and depth... an experience not to be missed!

Looking across the majestic peaks of the McGillicuddy Reeks, your eye will be drawn to twin peaks rising majestically skywards.

One of these peaks is Carrantuohill, the highest peak in Ireland. Reaching 1,038 metres high, it is the central peak of the MacGillicuddy Reeks range. The peak can be reached by hiking and scrambling and is a wonderful day out.

We suggest taking a guide if you are interested in adding this one to your achievements!

The Lower lake (Lough Leane) is known as The Lake of Youth, taking its name from the mythical story of Fionn MacCool (leader of the fierce army The Fianna), his son Oisín and Niamh Cinn Óir, the beautiful princess of Tír Na nÓg... the land of eternal youth.

The story goes that one day, while hunting at the lake, Fionn & Oisín met a beautiful woman called Niamh on a white horse, who said she had come to take Oisín (a warrior renowned for his courage and poetry) back with her to Tír Na nÓg. She said it was a happy place, with no pain or sorrow and where no one grows old. Oisín agreed to go and said goodbye to his father and friends. They rode off together on Niamh's horse. After what seemed to be three years together, Oisín begged Niamh to let him return to Ireland to see his family. She agreed but warned him not to get off the horse or let his feet touch the ground, or he wouldn't be able to return to Tír Na nÓg. He headed off on her magical white horse but when he arrived back in Ireland, he didn't recognise the place, or any of the people. He came across some men struggling to move a rock and stopped to ask them where he could find Fionn and the Fianna. The men replied that they had heard stories of the Fianna but that they were dead and gone over three hundred years. It was then that Oisín realised that time slows down in Tír Na nÓg. He was heartbroken but got ready to return to Tír Na nÓg to live out his days with Niamh. Before leaving, he offered to help the men. Remembering Niamh's warning he leaned over to pick up the rock, while still mounted on the horse, and fell off. The moment his feet touched the ground he immediately aged 300 years and died soon after.

Wines by the glass (and castles by the lake)

Amongst the trees on the lake shore is the distinctive silhouette of Ross Castle

The castle was the last stronghold in Ireland to be taken by Cromwell's army, finally falling in the 17th century. On hearing the legend that the castle, built circa 1535, could never be taken by land, the army approached the castle by boat across the lake and the castle guards surrendered without a battle.

These beautiful, ancient lands were formed by the movement of earth's tectonic plates 2 million years ago and polished by the snow and ice of glaciers 10,000 years ago.

Myth says that a young lady, distracted by her warrior lover, forgot to replace the capstone in the family well and by morning, water had filled the valley creating the Lakes of Killarney.
